SPEECH BY GEORGE WASHINGTON (PORTRAYED BY RUEL HAYMOND)

Good morning, Mr. Speaker. Representatives and fellow Americans. I'm going to share an excerpt from my farewell address given in 1796.

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness these finest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, "where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice?" And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religious principle. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on the minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule indeed extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Whoever is a sincere friend to it cannot with indifference look upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?"

Representatives, in this day and age the foundation of the fabric is shaking. And as I have said, religion and morality, a volume could not trace all of their connections with private and public felicity. If we neglect these principles, then a volume could not trace this negligence to all the private and public misery that will exist.

May we embrace these principles. May we love these principles. And may we live these principles.

Thank you, and good day.”

SPEECH BY ABRAHAM LINCOLN
(PORTRAYED BY MARK BEZZANT)

I’m Abe Lincoln. I bring greetings to you this morning to you in the balcony. Young people, Mr. Speaker, Fellow Representatives, I feel comfortable here in the House, young people.

You know a lot of people don’t understand that when I came to Gettysburg I had come to the conclusion that God was punishing us as a nation for the institution of slavery. I came to believe that every drop of blood that was taken with the lash would be taken by the sword until we abolished that evil institution. And when I arrived in Gettysburg November 19, 1863 I remembered something that many of you don’t know, and that was the night that I knelt in the Whitehouse.

The war was not going well, I thought it would have ended much earlier, and I knelt in prayer asking God to help us, and the cause of freedom. And while I knelt I remembered the peaceful feeling that came upon my bosom and I knew that it would go all right at Gettysburg. And so when I arrived at the train station the coffins were still stacked high, as they were re-burying the dead. And I remembered that day when I knelt asking for His help. As I stood to speak, the President of Harvard, President Everett, had spoken for two hours, I took from my pocket a piece of paper upon which I had made some notations and said the following:

“Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that this nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate -- we can not consecrate -- we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what is said here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work for which they who fought here and for which they so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave their last full measure that this nation, of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Thank you, and God bless all of you.”
